LATAH COUNTY

Latah County contains within its limits the most favored sections of the famous Palouse country. The western and southern parts of the county are rolling prairie, under thorough cultivation. Their products are wheat, oats, flax, barley, beans, hay, grasses, fruit, vegetables and root crops. At the present time wheat, barley, oats and flax are principally raised, although other crops are encroaching upon the grain acreage and reducing it somewhat each year. This section of Latah County, is an empire within itself and constitutes one of the richest agricultural countries in the world. The eastern and northeastern portions are covered with timber of great value. An immense body of white pine, about the only large tract of this kind of timber yet remaining untouched, lies in the eastern portion of the county, and will become a source of great wealth when manufactured. The Moscow & Eastern Railway Company has made a careful survey for a line of road from Moscow to the heart of this great body of timber, and is prepared to build the road as soon as lumbermen buy up the timber and seek to begin operations. It should be added that capital has already been attracted to this great volume of undeveloped wealth, the Weyerhaeuser Syndicate, Wisconsin Log and Lumber Company and the Northland Pine Company maintaining offices in Moscow, have extensive holdings of timber lands, and it is a question of but a short time when cutting operations will be commenced. Negotiations are now pending having for this object the building of the railroad this year, and in due time the logs will be hauled to immense mills near Moscow where the crude product will be manufactured into proper form for all the varied uses of modern building developments. These and kindred enterprises, now under way, will greatly enlarge the home market for farm products, thus insuring better and steadier prices. There are also rich deposits of gold, silver, mica, copper and other minerals within the borders of Latah County, which have interested capital and are rapidly being developed.
