STATE OF IDAHO.

Revised to date by

W. G. Scholtz,

State Director of Farm Markets, Boise.

Idaho is one of the newest states in the Union in its comparative development. There is an abundance of evidence that the development and equipment of farm lands, industrial life, private homes and the state institutions of Idaho is more modern and satisfying to the normal, sturdy citizen than can be found in a similar developed area in older states. The following Federal census table indicates something of the rapid growth and development of Idaho during the past few years:

POPULATION
State of Idaho	Percent Increase	Boise, Capital of Idaho	Percent Increase	Steam R. R. Mileage in Idaho

1910.....	30,807	5,283,604	65	46.38	...

The consistent, rapid growth as shown by these tables must indicate that Idaho has a just claim to the slogan "The 'growingest' state in the Union." The reason is easily understood. The mining industry, which gave the state the first employment and wealth, has produced constantly and consistently. Investors operate upon well-defined lines and have largely eliminated speculative uncertainty.

The live stock upon the open ranges furnished the first agricultural development. Earnings from the mines and ranges have built comfortable homes, business blocks, established banks, built railways, sawmills and constructed gigantic irrigation enterprises.

Mining and the range herds will continue to be important affiliated industries that furnish profitable employment to large numbers and will yield even larger financial returns in the future. Manufacturing is making steady progress. Transportation is now having its greatest growth. With the further development of the Columbia-Snake River water course, through the opening last year of the Celilo Canal, more regular boat service will be established to Lewiston, Idaho, which is the most interior seaport of the entire Northwest. The district is destined to become of vast strategic importance in transportation matters.

Even after the withdrawal of large forestry areas, there are yet millions of acres of land still available for agricultural and mineral development.

There are several contributing factors why Idaho will continue to grow and develop as a wealth producing state and appeal to a high type of citizens.

The climate and natural environment are superior. The range of the Rockies to the east and the Cascades to the west protect the inter-mountain district from devastating storms that levy heavy tribute against crops, property and human life in the less favored regions. There are, therefore, almost no devastating risks to be carried.

There are large areas of very superior agricultural lands that have natural fertility and produce a wide range of wealth-yielding crops.

The water supply is without doubt superior and more dependable because of the high altitude and naturally protected drainage areas that will forever remain under the direction of the state and national governments and serve as a perpetual insurance policy. The citizens have realized that growth and evolution were calling for readjustment almost continuously. Fortunately, of late years the element of speculation has been "soft-pedaled" and the investor and homeseeker who come in to share our responsibility and our "health and wealth dividends" have been attracted because of the real merit of the community and state resources. This has given the state a degree of stability not commonly found in a new state that is growing rapidly. An unusually high type of citizens with modern, progressive ideas have established homes and become a part of the state's activities.

The total area of the state is 8,480 square miles or 54,272,000 acres, of which nearly 40 per cent or 19,013,813 acres is within the National Forests, with nearly as large area of unappropriated and unreserved lands.

The classified lands now assessed in Idaho are shown as follows:

	Number of Acres in Idaho.
Irrigated and Agricultural Land.....	2,072,090.83
Dry Farm Land	810,612.12
Natural Meadow and Pasture	645,727.03
Grazing Land	1,056,574.44
Desert, Waste and Swamp	461,571.17
Mineral Land	61,186.98
Standing Timber	1,711,362.00
Cut-over and Burnt Timber Land.....	601,158.00
Suburban Land	30,057.85
Orchard and Vineyard	29,059.76
TOTAL	7,479,400.18	7,479,400
Acres within National Forests	19,013,813
Acres unappropriated and unsurveyed.....	18,970,393
Acres entered under Carey Act but not yet patented.....	540,988
Acres owned by the state, part of which is leased; lands that have been entered under desert, homestead, timber and mineral act, scrip and other forms for which patent has not yet matured and therefore not assessable.....	8,267,406
		54,272,000

The stockmen will be interested to know the location of the grazing land available within the National Forests. The public domain outside of the National Forests is available for grazing without a grazing fee.

Those desiring to enter public lands should inquire directly of either of the five federal land offices which have jurisdiction over all entries in their respective districts. Boise, Blackfoot, Coeur d'Alene, Hailey and Lewiston.

The following climatological schedule for the State of Idaho by counties furnishes information upon elevation, temperature, precipitation and sunshine. This data was prepared by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Boise, and shows a fair average for a series of years.

The topography of the state varies greatly and accommodates many needs. The lowest elevation is 600 feet and exceeds 13,000 feet in the high mountainous districts. The lower elevations allow a long grazing season and comparatively mild winters which permit the growing of tender varieties of fruits and nuts.

HORTICULTURE.

The horticultural division of agriculture has had a remarkable development during the past few years. The apple crop is yielding good returns chiefly because of the superior natural environment for this crop. Southwestern Idaho has become one of the world's chief prune producing districts. Other fruits are extensively grown but the apple and prune are the principal fruit crops.

Idaho shipped over 1,100 cars of apples in 1915, as against 600 cars the year before; the increase in tonnage of prunes was still greater during the same period, the output in 1915 being 1,110 cars, while in 1914 the prune shipments, both fresh and dried, totaled less than 500 cars.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

At the present time dairying and seed growing are attracting the most attention within the state, and the results secured in these lines are attracting the most attention among homeseekers, as is evidenced by the inquiries received almost daily by the State Department of Farm Markets, which has absorbed the former State Immigration Bureau.

Dairymen who have moved into the state from the east state that their experience shows that it costs at least one-third more to produce butterfat in the great dairy sections of the east and middle west than in the Snake River Valley of Southern Idaho. The natural advantages for dairying in this territory are resulting in the industry receiving a great impetus at this time.

GENERAL AGRICULTURE.

Diversified farming as applied to general agriculture will always be the state's chief source of wealth. With the vast acreage of irrigated lands and the rapidly enlarged area that is being brought under cultivation by applying dry-farming methods, it is freely predicted that Idaho, within a few years, will be producing not less than four times the present yield of wheat, or about 80,000,000 bushels annually, which is more than is being produced in any one state at the present time, except Kansas. Live stock upon the farms is increasing in a satisfactory way. Range cattle, however, have decreased in number. The live stock industry will yield the largest returns of any one branch of agricultural pursuit. The unusual amount of superior grazing furnished by the domestic pastures, particularly under irrigation and the regulated cheap grazing available in the National Forests and upon state lands will continue to support vast numbers of range stock.

MINING.

Idaho has for many years been an important lead and copper producing state. Producing properties yielding practically all of the precious metals are found in practically all parts of the state, but the largest properties are found in the northern part.

IRRIGATION AND POWER.

Co-ordinate with the development of the great irrigation systems, several large hydro-electric power plants have been installed which generate great quantities of electricity which is widely distributed over extensive transmission lines. It is fitting and proper that the natural waters of our lakes and streams should furnish the town and farm homes with the most important factor in modern comfort,—electricity. The following table indicates something of the development of irrigation farming. Very great progress has also been made in the districts where irrigation is not needed,—particularly on the cut-over lands in the northern part of the state.

STATE AND SECTARIAN EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

The State of Idaho has made liberal provision for those of her youth who, having completed the primary, intermediate and high school courses desire to continue their education.

Almost a quarter of a century ago the legislature of what was then Idaho Terroirty established the University of Idaho, locating the institution at Moscow in Latah county.

An Agricultural Experiment Station, co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture, is now an important adjunct of the University School of Agriculture. Branch experiment stations are conducted at Clagstone, Sandpoint, Caldwell, Gooding and Aberdeen.

The high standard maintained and the strong faculty employed has given the University a place of high rank among similar institutions in other states. Our young men and women are enabled to fit themselves for engaging in the professions, arts and trades. The success that has attended our university graduates who have gone forth is testimony of the efficiency of the institution.

Dr. K. C. Babcock, specialist in Higher Education in the United States Bureau of Education, says of our State University: " * * * The University of Idaho surprised me by the excellent quality of its equipment in buildings, grounds and laboratories. * * * The quality of the faculty is surprisingly good, both as to training and experience. Conditions are such that it has a better degree of stability than have several other of the State Universities of the west. * * * "

The number of students enrolled in the university for the year 1915-16 as shown by the November (1915) report was 799. This enrollment represented twenty-two states and two foreign countries.

Idaho supports two state normal schools, one at Lewiston and one at Albion. These schools are well equipped, and offer exceptional advantages for preparation to the young man or the young woman who expects to engage in the profession of teaching.

The Idaho Technical Institute, located at Pocatello, the Idaho Industrial Training School at St. Anthony, and the State School for Deaf, Dumb and Blind at Gooding are other state educational institutions with excellent records.

In addition to the various state institutions of learning, there are scattered throughout the state many schools supported by various churches. Among these are the College of Idaho (Presbyterian) at Caldwell; Gooding College (Methodist), at Gooding; St Margaret's Hall (Episcopalian), at Boise; St. Teresa's Academy (Catholic), at Boise; Ricks Academy (Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints), at Rexburg, and the Academy of the Immaculate Heart of Mary (Catholic), at Coeur d'Alene.
