KEEPS YOU WARMER IN THE WINTER AND GOOLER IN THE SUMMER. SAVES ENERGY.

Whether your house is brick, clapboard, shingle, or stucco, it will pay you to insulate to avoid "heat loss" in the winter and "heat gain" in the summer.

A thickness to the equivalent of 6 inches of good thermal insulation is recommended for ceilings and of 3 to 4 inches in the walls.

The overall cost of heating and air conditioning a home depends on a complex array of factors, but it is reliably estimated that proper insulation in a house can save as much as 20% to 30% annually. And, that represents a lot of energy and dollars.

HERE'S HOW INSULATION WORKS TO THE BENEFIT OF YOUR FAMILY'S HEALTH AND COMFORT:

RADIATION: Cold walls create discomfort. They draw heat from the body faster than can be comfortably maintained. The room temperature may be 70 degrees, yet the house feels chilly and drafty.

WHEN INSULATED: Wall temperatures closely correspond to inside air temperatures. Result: a more uniform comfort throughout the house. You don't need extra clothing or fuel to prevent rapid loss of body heat.

CONVECTION: This is what causes drafts and cold zones near the floor. Cold interior wall surfaces rapidly cool the air near these surfaces. The chilled air accelerates the air flow which speeds along the lower levels of every room.

WHEN INSULATED: Walls are warmer and help maintain more uniform temperatures at all room levels. This reduces drafts and the comfort zone reaches all the way down to floor level.

SUMMER RADIATION: Walls and attic area build up heat all through the day and into the night. This heat reservoir continues to radiate heat into the house, specially in rooms directly under the roof, causing heat distress to the occupants.

WHEN INSULATED: Heat on exterior walls and in the attic does not easily penetrate the thick barrier of insulation. Room temperatures stay in the comfort zone longer. Late night air can recover a comfortable temperature more easily. Air ... conditioners do not have to work as long and hard. You save energy.

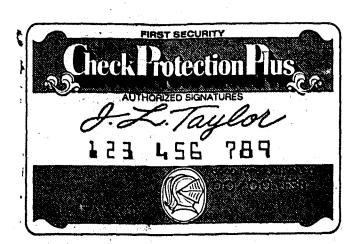

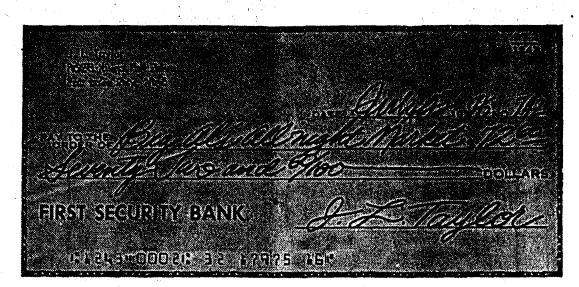

Adequate insulation will not only add to your personal comfort, it will reduce the work loads on your heating and cooling equipment. You will also be helping in the nationwide effort to conserve valuable energy. Use what you need, but save what you can.
